MISCELLANEOUS READING

THE STRANGER ON THE SILL. BY T. B. READ. Between broad fields of wheat and corn, Is the lovely home where I was born: The peach tree leans against the wall, And the woodbine wanders over all: There is the shaded doorway still-

But a stranger's foot has crossed the sill There is the barn, and, as of yore, I can smell the hay from the open door, And see the busy swallows throng, And hear the pewee's mournful song; But the stranger comes—oh! painful proof—

His sheaves are piled to the heated roof. There is the orchard—the very trees That knew my childhood so well to please Where I watched the shadowy moments r Till my life imbibed more of shade than sun: The swing from the bough still sweeps the air, But the stranger's children are swinging there

With its bulrush brook where the hazels grow Twas there I found the calamous root, And watched the minnows poise and shoot, And heard the robin lave his wing-But the stranger's bucket is at the spring.

It bubbles, the shady spring below,

O ye, who daily cross the sill, Step lightly, for I love it still; And when you crowd the old barn caves, Then think what countless harvest sheaves Have passed within that scented door. To cladden eyes that are no more!

NEW YORK ADVERTISEMENTS.

In the Personal of a New York paper yesterday were some strange advertisements. Here is one:

G. If you are free and your feelings are the same towards me as when last we met, address me as of old, and let me know where you are. M. W-Another was to sell an old bible: a third was (perhaps) from a hiding murderer or a burglar to inform an accomplice of his whereabouts. It reads

WASHERWOMAN WILL PLEASE SEND my Clothes on Saturday next, at three o' clock, P. M., to the corner of Broadway and Twen ty-second street; if not ready send her address, stating when and where she can be seen. Address Bostwick, Broadway Post Office. The following is all very proper and business like; but perhaps the old gentleman—whoever he is—"possessed of an unembarrassed property," may choose to keep it so. Like as not. A LADY, FIFTY-THREE YEARS OF AGE, wishes to correspond with an intelligent gentleman, not over sixty, with a view to marriage. The lady is affectionate and confiding, and is ac-customed to refined and intelligent society. The gentleman must be refined, and of good habits, kind, appreciative, and of sound principles, and possessed of an unembarrassed property. The lady being sincere, requests there be no trifling. Judge Wilson, of Philadelphia, is about to bring forth a new work upon the Conquest of Mexico. The author takes a different view from Prescott of the reliability of the Monkish Chronicles-doubting their accuracy. The opinions and arguments of Judge Wilson in this connection are endorsed by Hon. Lewis Cass, who first, in the North American Review, pointed out the inconsistencies and fables of the Spanish historians of the Conquest, even before Prescott wrote his history, and who, from his experience of 50 years in investigations of Indian life, is as capable of reliable judgment upon the work as any man in the coun
